WATER GARDENERS

As sell fish farming techniques developed, a new population emerged, result of the meeting of fishermen and land-people, farmers or craftsmen...

Bringing growing and breeding ideas in an environment only exploited by predation methods earthlings brought an agricultural point of view to the "Etang".

From time to time one goes to see how the shells grow, as every one knows it, they will be improved by rain.

The production will be sold when the crop is ripe, and he who sells with out preparing the shells sells his crop "on foot"...

In the past, fishermen were nick-named "esclops" (local word for clogs) because of the heavy boots they wore.

They were paid little respect, it was dishonourable for farmers and cask makers (who with fishermen were the majority of the population), to marry a daughter to one of these "esclops".

A well protected heritage

Some of these areas characterized by a high botanical and ornithological richness are listed in the ZNIEFF inventory (Natural Area of Ecological Interest Fauna and Flora) and Natura 2000. The water of the Thau lagoon is also the subject of a large surveillance: numerous tests by Ifremer (national research institute) and monitoring networks (REMI, REPHY, ROCCH, RSL).
